Sheilley is leaving NWKY Forward

■ Economic developer heading to Florida for similar position

The economic development agent credited with helping restructure the Henderson area's job recruitment efforts into a regional partnership will step down later this year after seven years in the position. Kevin Sheilley, who has been president and CEO of Northwest Kentucky Forward, will leave here in late November to become president and CEO of the newly formed Chamber & Economic Partnership for Ocala-Marion County, Fla.

The Northwest Kentucky Forward board will form a search committee at a special called board meeting next Monday. Certified economic developer Donna Crooks, a new staffer who has also been promoted to vice president of existing business, will serve as interim CEO of NWKY. Sheilley came here as president of the former Henderson Area Economic Development Council in mid-2005 but was promptly charged with turning that into a new four-county regional economic development organization that became son, Union, Webster and McLean counties. Besides the traditional roles of recruiting new industries, Sheilley expanded NWKF into a multifaceted organization that put renewed focus on retaining jobs by hiring a full-time manager of existing business to work directly with existing industries.

Joint panel gives initial approval to East End park

By Frank Boyett

The Henderson City-County Study Committee unanimously recommended Wednesday that the two governments jointly buy the old Audubon Baptist Church property for use as a small park. The issue was brought up in a letter by city Commissioner Robby Mills, who was unable to attend Wednesday's meeting, but wrote his fellow committee members a memo providing an update of property purchase negotiations and expressing his support.

The lot at Helm and Letcher streets is currently owned by the Citi-Center Corp., which has agreed to accept $20,000 for the property, Mills' letter said, noting the city and county governments would split that figure equally. "I think this will be a great opportunity for the children of this area, and will also help kick off the much-talked-about East End redevelopment," Mills wrote. "Please accept this letter as a positive vote on my behalf to recommend to both bodies of government that we purchase this land." "It's not a lot of money ... for the benefit," said Commissioner Alan Taylor, the city of Henderson's other voting representative on the committee. "There seem to be some pretty motivated citizens involved in this East End redevelopment and ... I'd like to help those people if we can to get this thing started off." "My vote would be to take it back to the respective bodies," said Magistrate Bruce Todd, a position echoed by Magistrate Carter Wilkerson. With those two in favor of it, passage at the Henderson Fiscal Court level seems all but assured, Taylor noted, because Magistrate Butch Puttman is very much in favor of the proposed park, which would be in his district. "He wore us out over it," said Wilkerson. The lot is currently vacant, but Assistant City Manager William "Buzzy" Newman pointed out the basement was not filled in when the old church was razed. "You wouldn't have to do anything but fill," said Taylor. "There's an elevation drop right now of maybe three to four feet."

Weather predicting wannabes will be out in force at Carolina festival

Have you been wondering where all the nation's woolly worm trainers are going to be this weekend? I know I have, and I was so grateful when Henderson native Ruby Spencer Powell answered that nagging question for me. The 1,000 trainers of woolly worm race contenders such as "Dale Wormhardt" will be in Banner Elk, N.C. pitting their furry, weather-predicting critters against each other and vying for the Saturday grand prize of $1,000 and the Sunday top award of $500.

The event is the 35th Annual Woolly Worm Festival that draws about 20,000 people each year to the Avery County community where they watch the woolly worm racing heats (with 20 worms in each heat) throughout the two days, also take in human entertainment, partake of goodies from 140 vendors, browse crafts and generally have a good time. Ruby and her husband

Owen, also a Henderson native and still frequently here to oversee the couple's Henderson County farmland, reside in Concord, N.C. and are among fans of the festival that features the crawly entities we call worms but are actually caterpillars. "It's a fun time for our family and we're looking forward to it," says Ruby, who graduated from Henderson City High and, like

Owen — a Henderson County High graduate — is often here. Their daughter, Julie Powell Gabhart, resides in Henderson and their other daughter, Cindy Powell Spencer, lives near her mom and dad. (Cindy's husband Bruce is from Connecticut, and no relation to Ruby's Spencer line). They're all going to the Woolly Worm Festival. "We're already discussing what foods we're going to have," Ruby said via email. She watched a number of the worm races last year and found that the trainers "really get into that kind of thing." The worms don't much care for racing on flat surfaces, and instead shimmy their way up three feet of nylon. The grand prize winner

Boy whose cancer fight inspired ‘thumbs-up’ campaign passes away

By Victoria Grabner

Thumbs-up for Lane Goodwin.

It’s a refrain that’s been both spoken and photographed all over the world, from Kentucky to Colorado to Japan and Afghanistan.

But at 7:53 p.m. Wednesday, the 13-year-old Beech Grove, Ky., resident — whose battle with cancer evolved into a massive awareness campaign and outpouring of support — passed away.

According to a Facebook profile set up to provide support for the Goodwins, it was announced Wednesday evening that Lane had died.

“Our sweet Lane gained his Angel wings,” the profile said. “Our hearts are broken, but God has performed a world wide miracle through Lane over the past few weeks. Please continue to pray for our family, especially Lane’s little brother, Landen.”

Goodwin was diagnosed with Alveolar Rhabdomyosarcoma stage IV on March 4, 2010. He relapsed on July 22, 2011, and again on May 8, 2012.

The Thumbs-up for Lane campaign, which started as a way to bolster the boy and his family, became a social media phenomenon that involved musicians, celebrities, TV stars, radio personalities, political candidates, soldiers and thousands upon thousands of everyday, concerned people.

The Facebook profile has 341,000 supporters, and as of 9:40 p.m. Wednesday, there were 36,360 comments responding to the announcement of Lane’s death.

Local group ready for Alzheimer's walk

By Donna B. Stinnett
dstinnett@thegleaner.com
270-831-8344

On Saturday when a team from Redbanks takes to the streets of Evansville to help raise money and build awareness about Alzheimer's, they will have already tackled such projects as selling forget-me-not flowers and designing a T-shirt to sell to fellow employees, families and the community.

They will have organized potato bar, fish fry, banana split, chili dump and pancake breakfast fundraisers, and they will have sold barbecue dinners and nachos.

They will have sold chrysanthemums, all in the name of Alzheimer's awareness.

Last year, their hard work won them the distinction of being the top fundraising team for the annual walk, said Megan Mortis, coordinator of the walk for the Alzheimer's Association Greater Kentucky/Southern Indiana chapter.

The team raised $6,106 that year. And so far, the Redbanks team has already beaten last year's amount, raising $7,179.50 as of Wednesday.

On Tuesday, there were 560 people who were registered for the walk, and more can register on Saturday.

"Several of us, including me, have had family members suffer from the illness," said Mary Whitledge, marketing/business development director for Redbanks and Redbanks Colonial Terrace.

"Our team works very hard each year to help raise money and awareness. We want to make a difference and find a cure before our generation and our children have the risk of the disease."

They start early in their year and keep it up year-round, she said.

Whitledge noted that Redbanks has two specialized Alzheimer's units, the Marina and the Harbor, which is a motivation for them.

"We are blessed with many families who volunteer their time and visit/help with residents and also participate in our fundraising efforts," she said.

Mortis said other Henderson groups also work in support of the annual walk, including a group from Chapel Hill and the ESA service group.

The one-mile Walk to End Alzheimer's 2012 is set for Saturday morning starting in downtown Evansville at Old National Bank. Registration starts at 9 a.m. and the walk starts at 10 a.m.

The Alzheimer's Association is the leading, global voluntary health organization in Alzheimer's care and support, and the largest private, nonprofit funder of Alzheimer's research, according to their mission statement. The telephone number for their Helpline is 800-272-3900.

County auctions delinquent tax bills

By Frank Boyett
fboyett@thegleaner.com
270-831-8342

Henderson County auctioned nearly $120,000 worth of delinquent taxes Wednesday to 10 different parties, according to County Clerk Renesa Abner.

Most of the buyers were professional purchasers of delinquent tax bills, which earn interest at 1 percent a month or 12 percent annually — a pretty fair return nowadays.

Purchasers are also allowed to charge collection costs such as attorney's fees.

Here are the buyers and the amounts they bought:

Jamos Fund I LP: The Highland Heights firm paid $35,123 for 26 bills, four of which owed more than $2,000. The properties were mostly in the city of Henderson.

Tax Ease Lien Servicing LLC: The Dallas, Texas, firm bought 26 tax bills totaling $28,759, one of which was a Watson Lane property where $6,534 was owed. Five other bills ranged from $1,014 to $5,238.

Mid-South Capital: The Olive Hill firm bought 32 bills totaling $15,477, none of which exceeded $1,000.

Kentucky Property Tax Services: The Alexandria firm bought 10 bills totaling $10,644, half of which were bills of around $1,500.

Kentucky Lien Holdings LLC: The Murray firm bought 10 bills totaling $9,808, half of which ranged from $1,275 to $1,662.

W.D. Copass: The Louisville resident bought 10 bills totaling $6,704, all of them within the city limits and none over $858.

Lien Solutions LLC: The Crestwood firm bought five bills totaling $5,751, ranging from $1,037 to $1,230.

CHJM Investments LLC: The Murray firm bought six bills totaling $5,354.

M.D. Wood: The Louisville resident bought 10 bills totaling $1,518, most of which were on Pleasant Hill Road and Birk City Road. None were more than $292 and four were under $100.

Nina Kendrick: The Henderson resident paid $247 for a single delinquent bill on South Holloway Street.

Former Sturgis man gets 8-year sentence, draws fine in fraud case

Gleaner staff

A former Sturgis resident was sentenced Tuesday to eight years in prison and ordered to pay $1.6 million in restitution to victims in Kentucky, Florida and Texas who he attempted to defraud through fictitious financial company called G3 Capital Management.

Chief U.S. Judge Joseph H. McKinley Jr. issued the sentencing for Owensboro resident, Cory B. George, 27, in U.S. District Court in Owensboro.

Judge McKinley further ordered George to forfeit contents from three bank accounts seized by the United States during the investigation. The accounts include $100,301.60 held by Dorman Trading, in the name of G3 Capital Management and $13,555.18 held by MF Global Trading in the name of G3 Capital Management, both in Chicago, and $370,334.77 held by the People's Bank in Marion County, Ky., in the name of G3 Capital Management.

These funds will be part of the restitution George must pay victims, a news release said.

George pleaded guilty to 11 counts of a superseding indictment in March. According to the plea agreement, George admits that between December of 2009 and April of 2011 he "defrauded investors of more than $1.5 million" by falsely advertising certificates of deposit, guaranteed by the Securities Investor Protection Corp. (SIPC), officials said. George told potential investors that SIPC provides account insurance equivalent to FDIC insurance.

However, G3 Capital was not a federally insured financial institution, and was not authorized to issue certificates of deposit, a news release said. G3 Capital Management and Cory George were also not members of the Securities Investor Protection Corp., and SIPC would not have covered George's investment activities with any guarantee, officials said.

The money George received from people was not invested, but instead was used for trading in the commodities market and for personal expenses such as shopping, traveling and gambling, according to the U.S. attorney's office.

"Cory George financially devastated a number of elderly victims with the especially devious lie that he could offer what no legitimate financial institution could: above-market rates in a government-insured certificate of deposit," said U.S. Attorney David J. Hale. "Investors are urged to thoroughly check any such claims offered by questionable promoters. Those who would perpetrate such frauds should know that regulators and federal law enforcement officers will work tirelessly to shut down sham investment schemes and prosecute those responsible."

At his change of plea hearing, George admitted to incorporating G3 Capital Management, with its principal place of business in Owensboro in December 2009, and later setting up business offices in Palm Beach, Fla., and Houston.

The superseding indictment charged George with 11 counts of mail fraud, in connection with fraudulent G3 certificates of deposit that George created and sent to investors either by U.S. mail or by Federal Express. Other mail fraud counts relate to investor checks that were sent interstate from Texas to George's Owensboro office, where they were deposited into a bank account he had opened in the name of G3 Capital Management at a bank located in Marion County.

Finally, two counts of the superseding indictment relate to small interest payments that were mailed by George to a Kentucky investor. Most of the victims who purchased certificates of deposit from George and G3 Capital Management never received back their investments.

George was arrested in Las Vegas on a criminal complaint that was filed in U. S. District Court on May 11, 2011, and was taken into the custody of the United States Marshals Service. George remains in federal custody.

This case was prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorney Marisa Ford and was investigated by the FBI in Owensboro and the Florida Office of Financial Regulation in West Palm Beach.

South Heights hosts Project CHILD

For the 11th year in a row, South Heights Elementary School has been named a national demonstration site for Project CHILD, a nationally validated educational program that has been recognized for its innovative methods.

The program, which is an acronym for Changing How Instruction for Learning is Delivered, was started by the Institute for School Innovation in Florida.

Students are taught in three-grade clusters. The technology-infused classroom environment helps build a solid academic foundation in reading, writing and math. Teachers are also able to specialize in one to two content areas, said Principal Rob Carroll.

Being designated a national demonstration site means that South Heights can host visitors to showcase the Project CHILD program. It is one of seven demonstration sites in the nation.

Man hospitalized after accident

A Henderson man was listed in satisfactory condition Wednesday after a two-vehicle accident Tuesday on U.S. 41.

The Kentucky State Police said the accident occurred around 4:20 p.m.

when a 1997 Ford Windstar driven by Joseph Russell, 75, was northbound on U.S. 41.

Authorities said Dudley was traveling north on U.S. 41 in a 1987 Cadillac Brougham.

Dudley was coming to a stop due to a vehicle turning left in front of him, officials said. Russell, who was behind Dudley, was unable to stop in time and rearended Dudley's vehicle.

No other injuries were reported.

Dance videos step up to fight breast cancer

We would be among the first to decry the mindless videos and photos that make up the bulk of what is available on the Internet, yet one site has entertained and, we'll admit it publicly, both cheered and touched us: www.pinkglovedance.com.

The original video in 2009 featured health-care workers in Portland, Ore., employees from seemingly every department in the hospital, all pink-gloved and grinning and dancing to “Down” by Jay Sean.

It was the hospital’s way of calling attention to the importance of early detection of breast cancer.

It also has allowed millions of people a respite from fatigue and worry and fear, using music to bring something fresh and hopeful out of the fight against a disease that kills more women than any other, except for lung cancer.

We couldn’t find out who first came up with the idea at that Portland hospital, but the nation’s largest privately held manufacturer of those now-famous pink gloves took it and ran with it, creating a follow-up video of more than 4,000 health-care workers and breast cancer survivors dancing their way to “You Won’t Dance Alone” by Best Day Ever around various sites, from the Golden Gate Bridge to Times Square.

Medline Industries Inc., an Illinois firm, has also donated more than $1 million to provide education and free mammograms to those in need and continues to make contributions every year through sales of its Generation Pink products. Medline hosted the 2011 Pink Glove Dance Competition that featured employees of 139 hospitals across the U.S. and Canada. Employees at Lexington Medical Center in West Columbia, S.C., won that first competition. The $10,000 prize was donated to the Vera Bradley Foundation supporting breast cancer research.

The 2012 competition already is under way. The videos aren’t just fun. Even the money that the winning hospital staff receives for its efforts pales when compared to the admiration the employees show, in song and dance, for breast cancer survivors. Each step is a demonstration of the exuberance of life, the triumph over a potentially deadly disease.

If laughter is indeed the best medicine (and we’re among those who believe it can have a healing effect), then dancing must be the cure — even temporarily — for feeling alone or confused or worried as you fight for life.

And it’s a fine way to celebrate your victory or that of someone you know.

Russia drops nuclear-plan bombshell from Georgia, first realized just how vulnerable the Soviet weapons had become when he visited freshly deposed Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. Back in Washington, Nunn teamed with Sen. Richard Lugar, Republican of Indiana, and this farsighted bipartisan duo drafted its program and sold it to a skeptical White House and Congress as a matter of unprecedented global urgency.

MARTIN SCHRAM

Now widely acclaimed, the Nunn-Lugar program may be the most Nobel Peace Prize-worthy effort never to have received that international honor. Consider the program’s global safeguarding accomplishments:

The program deactivated more than 7,659 strategic nuclear warheads, destruction of 902 intercontinental ballistic missiles, 498 missile silos, 191 mobile missile launchers, 684 submarine-launched ballistic missiles, 492 submarine missile launchers, 155 strategic bombers, 906 nuclear air-to-surface missiles and 194 nuclear test tunnels, provided protection for railroad trains carrying nuclear-weapons shipments, built 39 stations for monitoring biological agents, and disposed of 3,023 metric tons of chemical weapons agents in Russia and Albania.

Then there was a reality that existed beyond the big numbers: The Soviet collapse would have created three instant nuclear superpowers in modestly sized new republics — Ukraine, Belarus and Kazakhstan. Nunn-Lugar helped finance the removal of those nuclear and chemical stockpiles.

Russia’s announcement last week on not renewing its Nunn-Lugar partnership came after it ordered the U.S. Agency for International Development to close its aid efforts.

Putin’s Russia doesn’t want to be seen as an aid recipient, but an aid donor. Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Sergei Ryabkov emphasized in his statement last week that Russia now can pay for what needs to be done. He said a new Nunn-Lugar partnership pact should be drafted to reflect that.

So it doesn’t come down to totally scrapping the partnership.

In a recent speech, Nunn cited a quotation that bears repeating:

“The world has achieved brilliance without conscience. Ours is a world of nuclear giants and ethical infants. We know more about war than we know about peace, more about killing than we know about living.”

The speaker was not a famous professor or anti-war activist. It was five-star Gen. Omar Bradley, the World War II hero, speaking in 1948, shortly after the only time nuclear bombs were detonated in wartime. Sadly, his words ring even truer today.

That’s why we need, more than ever, a truly global Nunn-Lugar program.

ELECTION LETTERS POLICY

If you plan to submit Opinion Page comments on any of the races subject to the Nov. 6 general election, you need to carefully review the following guidelines for political letters, including a deadline of NOON WEDNESDAY, OCT. 24.

While the newspaper values political letters, editors will closely monitor their content and enforce limits on their length.

So, if you plan to join the election debate via our Opinion Page, we invite you to do so, but please observe the guidelines:

KEEP ‘EM BRIEF: Chances of a letter being published are greater if it is brief. Generally, a typed or computer-generated, double-spaced letter should be limited to ONE standard page, or about 250 words.

CANDIDATES, CLOSE RELATIVES: Except when a rebuttal letter is deemed to be appropriate, the Opinion Page is off limits during the campaign to candidates. We also discourage endorsement letters from close relatives (parents, siblings, children, grandchildren).

GOOD TASTE: Political letters face the same standards applied to all letters. Unfounded allegations and name-calling will disqualify a letter.

ONE LETTER PER RACE: Readers are permitted one letter per race, except when a rebuttal letter is deemed to be appropriate.

LETTER OVERLOAD: If the number of letters overwhelms the space available, we will strive to select the most representative letters. We are rarely able to publish all letters we receive.

VERIFICATION: As is the requirement for all letters, political letters must include the name of the writer, a daytime phone number and an address. Hand-delivered letters should be verified before the writer leaves The Gleaner.

OUR ADDRESS: By mail: The Gleaner, P.O. Box 4, Henderson, KY 42419; by fax: (270) 827-2765; by email: letters@thegleaner.com

CUTOFF DATE: Noon Wednesday, Oct. 24. All letters must be IN HAND by that time in order to be considered for publication.

FINAL REMINDER: Keep letters brief, clean and to the point. Avoid getting personal. As always, the responsibility for determining which letters are suitable for publication rests with the newspaper.

What recovery is the first lady seeing?

First Lady Michelle Obama said the other day that America is in a “huge recovery” because of what her husband has done, and what I’d advise is that she get a pair of binoculars and look out a White House window.

She just might observe more of the desperately poor wandering around than she’s seen before, and that would not be by accident.

A Washington Post story reports that family homelessness in Washington, D.C., is up by 18 percent since last year. The recession ended in late 2009. The recovery, mugged by a pork-ridden stimulus and a malicious gang of other misperceived policies, is limping along more weakly than any recovery since World War II. The result is suffering in almost every direction you look.

Those hurt the most are often those who had the least to begin with. Some 46.2 million Americans are now below the poverty line. And, it might be noted by Democrats claiming a Republican war on women, the poverty rate among them is a very scary 16.3 percent.

The middle class has also taken a crippling hit — a median income drop from $54,983 when President Barack Obama took office to $50,964 this year. As others have written, the median has decreased more during the Obama recovery than it did during the recession the president has blamed on his predecessor.

Welfare has meanwhile been going up, with expenditure increases of something like $193 billion a year under Obama. The crying need is for something that would make the welfare less necessary: jobs. Some 14.7 percent of Americans are looking for jobs but can’t find them or have settled for part-time jobs when they want full-time employment. The $831 billion stimulus was supposed to help fix this, but the tons of money produced maybe an ounce of temporary relief while contributing to employment-impeding debt.

The stimulus came up in the vice presidential debate when Republican candidate Paul Ryan pointed to “$90 billion in green pork to campaign contributors and special interest groups.” An Associated Press fact checker concurred that $528 million went to the Solyndra solar-panel firm that was “politically connected” and went bankrupt. The reporter went on to say, however, that there was also energy stimulus help for such things as making homes “more energy efficient” and to “public entities constructing high-speed rail lines.”

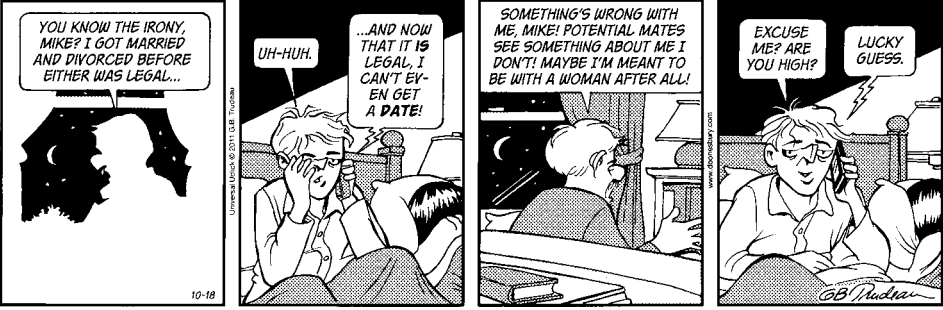

Excuse me, but more recipients of grants and loans than just Solyndra had political connections and went under, and inspectors said the program to weatherize homes was poorly executed in many instances, even to the point of endangering lives. High-speed rail is pork to states and has nothing to do with stimulating the economy in the here and now.

Looking ahead to solutions, the Obama administration is counting on what it has sometimes called a tax on millionaires, which turns out to be a raised tax on incomes of $250,000 and more for married couples. That could be a teacher and a cop in high-pay places like New York City, writes Michael Tanner of Cato Institute. The tax would produce about two-thirds less revenue than what’s needed to meet Obama’s planned spending hikes next year, he writes, and, according to a study by a major accounting firm, could cost more than 700,000 jobs.

I like the first lady, and I don’t blame her for applauding her husband, but for a less partial view, check in with someone like Mortimer Zuckerman, a media owner and real estate whiz of the kind who produces jobs. He was for Obama in 2008, thinks he has done more populist pandering than leading as president, and rates the recovery as something we have to recover from.

One arrested in plot to attack Fed

By Tom Hays and Colleen Long
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A Bangladeshi man who came to the United States to wage jihad was arrested in an elaborate FBI sting on Wednesday after attempting to blow up a fake car bomb outside the Federal Reserve building in Manhattan, authorities said.

Before trying to carry out the alleged terrorism plot, Quazi Mohammad Rezwanul Ahsan Nafis went to a warehouse to help assemble a 1,000-pound bomb using inert material, according to a criminal complaint. He also asked an undercover agent to videotape him saying, “We will not stop until we attain victory or martyrdom,” the complaint said.

Agents grabbed the 21-year-old Nafis — armed with a cellphone he believed was rigged as a detonator — after he made several attempts to blow up the bomb inside a vehicle parked next to the Federal Reserve, the complaint said. Authorities emphasized that the plot never posed an actual risk. However, they claimed the case demonstrated the value of using sting operations to neutralize young extremists eager to harm Americans.

Nafis appeared in federal court in Brooklyn to face charges of attempting to use a weapon of mass destruction and attempting to provide material support to al-Qaida. Wearing a brown T-shirt and black jeans, he was ordered held without bail and did not enter a plea. His defense attorney had no comment outside court.

Prosecutors say Nafis traveled to the U.S. on a student visa in January to carry out an attack. In July, he contacted a confidential informant, telling him he wanted to form a terror cell, the criminal complaint said. Nafis was living in Queens.

Don't expect policy to start Cuban exodus to U.S.

By Alicia A. Caldwell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Cuba's surprise decision to make it easier for citizens to leave the country doesn't mean Cubans can book tickets on commercial planes and head for Miami.

Would-be immigrants and tourists still need permission from the U.S. government to enter America legally. With a multiyear wait for a visa, the average Cuban may not be leaving home any time soon.

“This may end up being ado about nothing,” said a Cuban-immigration expert, Jose Azel of the University of Miami's Institute for Cuban and Cuban American Studies.

A State Department spokeswoman, Victoria Nuland, said Tuesday that the U.S. welcomes “any reforms that'll allow Cubans to depart from and return to their country freely. We remain committed to the migration accords under which our two countries support and promote safe, legal and orderly migration. Our own visa requirements remain unchanged.”

Under those 1994 accords, Washington agreed to stop allowing Cubans caught at sea to enter the U.S. In 1995 the U.S. government began its “wet-foot, dry-foot” policy that allows anyone who makes it to shore to stay, while those caught at sea are turned back.

Since then, thousands of Cubans who made the treacherous trip across the Straits of Florida have been rewarded with entry into the United States. Unlike undocumented immigrants from almost any other country, most Cubans not only can stay but also seek legal residency and eventually citizenship.

The welcoming policy isn't just for Cubans who arrive by sea. In recent years, thousands of would-be immigrants have opted to hire smugglers to ferry them to Mexico, where they head over land to Texas. These “dusty foot” Cubans are allowed into the U.S. after screenings.

Azel said the end of the Cuban exit visa program “isn't likely to be a free for all” exodus like the 1980 Mariel boatlift, which lasted six months and ended with about 125,000 immigrants, including criminals and mental patients, making it to Florida.

Azel noted that nearly every Latin American country, including Mexico, requires an entry visa for Cubans.

Government: Violent crimes rose

Violent crimes unexpectedly jumped 18 percent last year, the first rise in nearly 20 years, and property crimes rose for first time in a decade. But academic experts said the new government data fall short of signaling a reversal of the long decline in crime.

The U.S. Bureau of Justice Statistics reported Wednesday that the increase in the number of violent crimes was the result of an upward swing in simple assaults, which rose 22 percent, from 4 million in 2010 to 5 million last year. The incidence of rape, sexual assault and robbery remained largely unchanged, as did serious violent crime involving weapons or injury.

Property crimes were up 11 percent in 2011, from 15.4 million in 2010 to 17 million, according to the bureau's annual national crime victimization survey. Household burglaries rose 14 percent, from 3.2 million to 3.6 million. The number of thefts jumped by 10 percent, from 11.6 million to 12.8 million.

No suspects yet in bar homicide-arson

Denver police don't have any suspects as they investigate the slayings of five people whose bodies were found at a neighborhood bar after a fire broke out early Wednesday. Investigators believe they were killed before the fire and the blaze was set to cover up the slayings.

The fire at Fero's Bar & Grill was spotted just before 2 a.m., closing time for bars, by a police officer on patrol. Firefighters found four women and one man dead inside.

The Denver medical examiner said the victims included 63-year-old Young Fero, of the Denver suburb of Aurora. State records identify her as one of the bar's owners.

The other victims were Daria M. Pohl, 22, Kellene Fallon, 45, Ross Richter, 29, and Tereasa Beesley, 45. Pohl, Fallon and Beesley were from Denver. Richter's hometown wasn't released.

Police chief Robert White said there's nothing to indicate a murder-suicide, meaning whoever is responsible is still at large. He said he was hopeful the killings were an “isolated act” but couldn't say for sure yet.

“It's very alarming and that's why it's so important that we investigate it to the fullest,” White said.

Coach quits in prostitution scandal

A longtime high school hockey coach whose name appeared on a list of 21 men accused of paying a local Zumba fitness instructor for sex has stepped down.

Kennebunk High School coach Donald Hill announced Tuesday he wouldn't seek to renew his contract for next season for personal reasons after 14 years as head coach, school Superintendent Andrew Dolloff said Wednesday.

Police on Tuesday released the names of the first batch of men to be summoned after being accused of engaging a prostitute.

Hill, 52, was listed alongside a former mayor and several businessmen. The coach, who's from Old Orchard Beach, a few towns north of Kennebunk, didn't immediately return a cellphone message seeking comment Wednesday.

Israel counted Gaza calories

By Amy Teibel
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israeli authorities blockading the Gaza Strip in 2008 went so far as to calculate how many calories would be needed to avert a humanitarian disaster in the impoverished Palestinian territory, according to a newly declassified military document.

The military said Wednesday the guidelines were never implemented. However, critics rejected the claim, saying the document was new evidence that Israel used food as a pressure tactic to try to force Gaza's Hamas rulers from power — a strategy that ultimately failed.

Israel maintained a strict blockade over Gaza from 2007-10. During that time, Israel limited food supplies entering Gaza and maintained a baffling list of items that were banned or permitted as part of a broader effort to topple the violently anti-Israel Hamas by squeezing the economy.

In the January 2008 document, Israel determined how to ensure that Gazans eat 2,279 calories of food each day, a figure in line with World Health Organization guidelines.

It broke down the calorie allocation by various food groups, and in minute details. It said that males aged 11 to 50 required 316.05 grams of meat per day, and women in the same age group needed 190.47 grams of flour. The analysis also included adjustments for locally grown farm products, as well as an assessment of the kinds of food imports that would be needed to sustain the population.

Brahimi's push to get Assad and rebels seeking to topple him to stop fighting for the four-day Eid al-Adha feast set to begin Oct. 26 reflects how little progress international diplomacy has made in halting 19 months of deadly violence in Syria.

Group accuses rebels of executions

Libyan rebels appear to have “summarily executed” scores of fighters loyal to Moammar Gadhafi, and probably the dictator himself, when they overran his hometown a year ago, a human rights group said Wednesday.

The report by Human Rights Watch on alleged rebel abuses that followed the October 2011 capture of the city of Sirte in the final major battle of the eight-month civil war is one of the most detailed descriptions of what the group says were war crimes committed by the militias that toppled Gadhafi, and which still play a major role in Libyan politics today.

Abortion ruling fails to silence debate

MONTEVIDEO — Uruguay's

Senate legalized first-trimester abortions for all women Wednesday in a groundbreaking measure that came with so many strings attached it left neither side in the bitter debate satisfied.

Senators voted 17-14 to back the measure, which has passed the lower house and President Jose Mujica is expected to quickly sign into law. The legislation establishes that the public health care system must guarantee every woman the freedom to decide without pressure whether or not to have the procedure.

That's a big step for Latin America, where only Cuba grants all women the right to abortions. But it comes with so many conditions that both sides wonder how Uruguay will keep this promise.

Police apologize for using stun gun

LONDON — British police apologized Wednesday for using a stun gun to subdue a blind stroke victim they wrongly thought was carrying a samurai sword, a bizarre case of mistaken identity that left the man fearing for his life.

Lancashire Police Chief Stuart Williams said police brought the victim to a hospital to be checked out after they realized they had used the weapon against the wrong man.

'Mastermind' of Sept. 11 terror in camouflage for Gitmo court

By Ben Fox
Associated Press

GUANTANAMO BAY NAVAL BASE, Cuba — The self-styled terrorist mastermind of the Sept. 11 attacks lectured a military court on government hypocrisy Wednesday and wore a previously banned camouflage vest to his pretrial hearing before being rebuked by the judge for his comments.

Khalid Sheikh Mohammed was in court as part of a weeklong hearing focusing largely on the secrecy rules that will govern legal proceedings against him at the U.S. base in Cuba.

Mohammed was allowed to wear a hunting-style camouflage vest with his white tunic and turban over the objections of prosecutors, who feared it might disrupt the proceedings.

It had no apparent effect, but his five-minute speech denouncing the government's arguments about the need to protect national security transfixed the court and drew a reprimand from the judge.

Until that point, the 47-year-old Mohammed sat quietly through a day of courtroom arguments on proposed rules for handling classified evidence in the war-crimes case. When he finally spoke, it was to point out what he saw as the prosecution's hypocrisy for seeking to keep secret some details of what happened to him during years of captivity in the CIA's secret prisons.

Mohammed told the judge, Army Col. James Pohl, that “the government uses national security as it chooses,” urging him to keep that in mind as he considers requests from defense lawyers and the American Civil Liberties Union to scale back the rules for evidence and testimony.

“Many can kill people under the name of national security, and to torture people under the name of national security,” the Arabic-speaking Mohammed said through a translator. “And detain their underage children under the name of national security.”

In an apparent reference to Osama bin Laden, Mohammed noted that “the president can take someone and throw them into the sea in the name of national security.”

Pohl had allowed Mohammed to make the statement, but then said he wouldn't allow it to happen again.

Mohammed, who has told authorities he was behind the hijacking plot, is charged along with four co-defendants with crimes that include terrorism and murder.

Landowners on border say they were shortchanged

By Paul J. Weber

BROWNSVILLE, Texas— When the federal government began seizing private land along the U.S.-Mexico border to build a towering fence, Teofilo Flores was offered $1,650 for a slice of his backyard.

At first, it seemed like a square deal. But then the cotton grower learned that his neighbor had received 40 times more for a similar piece of land. And another nearby farmer pocketed $1 million in exchange for his cooperation.

Since 2008, hundreds of landowners on the border have sought fair prices for property that was condemned to make way for the fence. But many of them received initial offers that were far below market value. And dozens accepted those amounts without seeking any legal help, only to discover neighbors had won far larger settlements after hiring attorneys.

“You get angry. But that’s the way of life, I guess,” Flores said of the bigger payouts won by other landowners. “You know, people that got more money can afford to do more things.”

The disparities raise questions about the Justice Department’s treatment of hundreds of landowners from Texas to California who couldn’t afford lawyers and must now live with a massive steel barrier running through their farms, ranches and yards.

The wide variation in price “underscores how unfair these original offers were,” said attorney Corinna Spencer-Scheurich, who represented poor and middle-class landowners when the seizures began.

The federal government “is using its power, its clout, to try to take land from people at a price that is unfair. I think that is clear based on the settlements,” she said.

Federal attorneys say the initial offers represented only a starting amount that would permit the seizures to begin and could be adjusted later.

In 2006, Congress ordered construction of 670 miles of heavy metal fence to help curb illegal immigration. The project required landowners on the border to give up property that ranged from the size of a driveway to much larger farms and commercial lots.

The Constitution requires the government to provide compensation whenever it takes property for a public project using a process known as eminent domain.

About 400 landowners have been affected. Most are in Texas, because that state has more private property along the border than do New Mexico, Arizona or California, where much of the border land is already in federal hands.

An Associated Press analysis of nearly 300 Texas land cases found that most of the settlement money went to a small group of owners, all of whom had attorneys. The legal help appeared to pay off: Of nearly $15 million that has been paid out, 85 percent has been awarded to just a third of the property holders.

There are other reasons for the larger settlements beyond the advantage of legal representation. Many of the best-compensated landowners oversee large citrus groves or other commercial operations on land that is inherently more valuable.

Most of the fence construction was completed two years ago, but the government is still negotiating for land surrounding the project.

One recent case involved 8 acres at the entrance to a sable palm grove managed by The Nature Conservancy. The government initially offered $114,000, but in August the matter was settled for nearly $1 million.

The fence forced a developer to scrap plans for an entertainment district along the Rio Grande in Brownsville. The government’s first offer was $233,300. After a three-year legal battle that almost went to a federal trial, both sides settled for $4.7 million.

But those examples did nothing to help people such as Oscar Ceballos, the owner of a trucking business whose home is on the same half-acre as his fleet of tractor-trailers and his repair garage. Ceballos said he was first offered $1,600 to surrender about 60 feet of his property.

He called the offer ridiculous. But with no money to hire an attorney, he said, he went to a legal-aid clinic that agreed to take his case for free. He joined a group of 28 landowners who demanded a federal jury review their cases — the fiercest opposition to the fence along the entire border.

Ceballos accuses government attorneys of trying to sabotage his case by uncovering his assets and pressing his lawyer about why a free clinic would accept him as a client.

Eventually, Ceballos said, his lawyer told him he had taken the case as far as he could and suggested hiring a more skilled private attorney if he wanted to wring any more money out of the government. By that point, Ceballos had succeeded in getting nearly $40,000 more.

“They wouldn’t have paid me anything close to that if I didn’t have legal aid,” he said. “I guess that gave me a chance to fight the government a little bit. Some other people didn’t know or have the chance to fight the government, and they just took what they were offered.”

Private security company target of myriad lawsuits totaling millions

By Paul Elias
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO— Few security companies have benefited as much from the surge of Sept. 11-related government contracts as Akal Securities, a New Mexico-based company controlled by American converts to a Sikh religious sect.

The company launched in 1980 with small contracts to protect grocery stores and bars and now has 10,000 employees who stand guard at federal courthouses in 40 states, Army bases, airports, U.S. embassies and federal immigration detention centers. It has won more than $3 billion in federal contracts since Sept. 11, 2001 and has become the largest courthouse security contractor in the country.

But along with its phenomenal growth comes mounting legal problems.

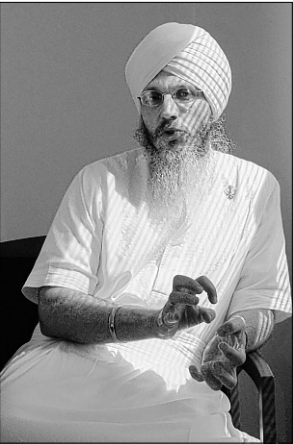

Akal is the subject of dozens of legal cases pursued by federal officials, whistle-blowing employees and others with wide-ranging allegations, including many wrongful terminations. The company itself disclosed 134 “pending, or current litigation matters” throughout the country to a Washington D.C. federal court last year. A competitor, Walden Security disclosed 12 such matters to the same court. Walden employs 3,000.

Just last month, Akal agreed to pay $1.9 million to settle Justice Department allegations that it falsified firearms training test for guards at several federal courthouses in northern California.

Akal’s president Daya Khalsa said his company faces no more legal problems than other similar-sized companies.

The overwhelming majority of Akal employees, he said, are performing admirably and that the mistakes of a few workers are blown out of proportion in costly lawsuits that are largely without merit.

“We are in a legal system in our country and a regulatory system that encourages a tremendous amount of litigation,” Khalsa said in a phone interview from his New Mexico office. “We don’t consider it to be a large number.”

Khalsa said the company settled the gun-range allegations on Sept. 28 to avoid further financial exposure and the company feared an even bigger financial loss if it fought the allegations before an unpredictable jury.

Specifically, gun range operators were accused of allowing some guards to complete target shooting tests beyond the allotted time limit and then telling the Marshals Service they passed.

The company’s name (pronounced a-CALL) is a Sanskrit word meaning “undying” or immortality and it was a battle cry of Sikh warriors. The Sikh religion is 500 years old and claims 26 million followers worldwide.

Medicaid provider to end contract

■ Move would cut up to 200 jobs in Lexington in early July

By Roger Alford
Associated Press

FRANKFORT— A Medicaid managed care provider will terminate its contract with the Kentucky Cabinet for Health and Family Services after only a year, a move that would cut some 200 jobs in Lexington. Kentucky Spirit Health Plan, a subsidiary of St. Louis-based Centene Corp., announced Wednesday that it is exercising its right to end the contract effective July 5, 2013. Kentucky Spirit said in a statement that it is committed to helping the 140,000 clients it serves transfer to one of Kentucky's three other Medicaid contractors. Gov.

Steve Beshear said all of those clients would continue to receive medical services without interruptions. Centene Chief Administrative Officer Carol Goldman said the company regrets the loss of the Kentucky jobs, which represent over $12 million a year in wages and benefits. The company will seek to transfer some employees to other locations. "The company is working closely with its employees to provide them with the appropriate levels of support and resources during this transition," Goldman said. Kentucky Spirit began operations in Kentucky last November.

Since that time, "there have been concerns about the sustainability of the commonwealth's Medicaid managed care program," the company said in a statement Wednesday. "The decision to terminate the contract comes after months of effort by Kentucky Spirit and the cabinet to resolve these concerns and only after it has become clear that there is not a viable path to a sustainable Medicaid managed care program in Kentucky," according to the statement. Kentucky Spirit President Jean Rush said the organization has achieved a 17 percent decrease in medical and surgery costs to the Medicaid program and a 30 percent reduction in pharmacy costs over the past year. Rush also said Kentucky Spirit cut Medicaid spending by 94 percent for people illegally going from doctor to doctor seeking narcotics. "We are proud of the outcomes we have achieved in the short time under the contract," Rush said. Rush also said Kentucky Spirit has increased wellness checkups for children by 30 percent and diabetes testing by 53 percent. The Cabinet for Health and Family Services clearly wasn't happy with Kentucky Spirit's decision, charging that it will "abandon its obligation" to Medicaid recipients who are generally poor, disabled or elderly.

has the distinction of being the official predictor for the coming winter. While scientists scoff at the notion of a woolly worm foretelling the mildness or harshness of the season, festival officials point out that over the last two decades, the worms have an average 85 percent accuracy rating. That's even better than Kentucky weather folklorist Dick Frymire's average. One of the founders of the Woolly Worm Festival is Jim Morton, who was familiar with woolly worm lore and among those residents who were trying to drum up more interest in downtown Banner Elk. Some kind of annual, special attraction was needed, and Morton was inspired by the vicinity's woolly worms. Soon, a Woolly Worm Festival Association was formed and the resulting first festival captured the attention of NBC national news, which ran some footage of the unusual occasion. Eventually the Avery Banner Elk Chamber of Commerce and the Kiwanis Club began sponsoring the two-day happenings whose admission fees go back into the community for schools, children's programs and tourism promotion. Should you find yourself near Banner Elk this weekend, you might want to fork over the $5 entrance fee for adults, and $2 for kids ages 5-12. Younger children are admitted free. The festival takes place from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. Sunday. Probably you're thinking that you might want to enter a woolly worm in the races next year. If you do, Morton (on the festival's website), advises that you make sure your little athlete has an affinity for climbing. You can't take it for granted, apparently, because it turns out that woolly worms "are moody." Who would have thought it?

from 1A

Crooks, a former Henderson EDC staffer, came to NWKF recently to fill that role. To help entrepreneurs start and grow new businesses, Sheilley forged a partnership with Community Ventures Corp., a Lexington-based nonprofit organization that provides counseling as well as financing for small businesses. CVC, which is the nation's largest Small Business Administration micro-enterprise business lender, in 2005 opened an office here that NWKF said has helped launch 130 small businesses and create 200 jobs. Recognizing the importance to industries of having an educated workforce, NWKF became an advocate for public education — organizing events such as the Rally 4 Education to encourage citizens' involvement in local schools — and helped resurrect a training program for workers at existing industries, now called the Northwest Kentucky Training Consortium. NWKF often was successful in securing grants for its initiatives, helping grow the original two-person staff to eight people. Most recently, it obtained more than $160,000 in grants to open the Northwest Kentucky Entrepreneurship Center, a business incubator on the fifth floor of the Soaper Building that is also the new home of NWKF. "When he came, it was the right time for this area," banker Doug Bell, chairman of the NWKF board, said. "He built a strong alliance between the counties to help us go to the next step," Bell said. "It's time for our board to find the next person to go to the next step in economic development, job retention and job growth." Sheilley was recruited to Henderson in part on the strength of his recruitment of an 885-employee Amazon.com distribution center to a 770,000-square-foot former Fruit of the Loom facility in Campbellsville, Ky. He didn't duplicate such a headline announcement during his years in Henderson. But Sheilley said that's in part because northwest Kentucky — for better or worse — hasn't had a big empty available building to market to a new company. He for years has said that the lack of available buildings has hindered recruitment efforts here, but repeated attempts to build a spec

CHAMBER BREAKFAST

The Henderson Chamber of Commerce's Industrial Appreciation Breakfast this morning is a sellout. "We can't guarantee a seat at a table" for anyone without a reservation, Chamber President Brad Schneider said. The event begins at 7:30 a.m. at the Henderson Country Club. The Industry of the Year award will be presented and Accuride Corp. President and CEO Rick Dauch will be the keynote speaker.

building have fallen short. Nonetheless, NWKF takes credit for more than 2,000 new or retained jobs in the region, such as helping preserve 500 existing jobs at Rio Tinto Alcan's Sebree aluminum smelter through its assistance in obtaining some $80 million in state tax incentives to modernize the plant. Further, Sheilley said progress has been made at the 800-acre Four Star Industrial Park on the Henderson-Webster county line that so far has a single company: the Columbia Sportswear distribution center that preceded his arrival here. Coal rights beneath the Four Star property have been secured to ensure companies that mining won't take place beneath them; infrastructure such as water and sewer lines and roadbed have been extended; and Foreign Trade Zone status that affords tax advantages to certain companies is in place. "Whoever is fortunate to fill my position" will be able to market Four Star more readily than in recent years, Sheilley said. The Henderson County Riverport offers additional industrial sites as well. "A lot of people are looking at the riverport right now," he said. Meanwhile, Sheilley takes pride in the organization- and coalition-building that took place while he has headed NWKF. "We were able to put together a regional public-private partnership as a lead economic development organization, which has been a challenge in Kentucky" where communities have been reluctant to team up with neighboring counties, he said. "This is a model for a lot of people: local government and businesses in four counties coming together to benefit the whole region," Sheilley said. He said he also is proud of economic development and workforce development team at NWKF that he said is "second to none" in Kentucky or even the Southeast. As for his new position, Sheilley said his career so far has largely involved helping start economic development organizations "almost from snuff." In Ocala, a recent merger of the chamber of commerce and economic development organization proved attractive to him. "I am a big believer in having chambers and economic development combined," as they were in Campbellsville, Sheilley said. Nonetheless, NWKF managed to form working partnerships with independent organizations such as the Henderson Chamber of Commerce, Downtown Henderson Partnership and others. "Kevin and I have been terrific partners and really good friends," Henderson Chamber President Brad Schneider said. "I appreciate everything he did for Henderson County and the four counties, and I'm sure the people in Ocala will be thrilled with the work he will do for them."

Cards win, take lead over Giants

■ St. Louis now up 2-1 in series after rain-delayed 3-1 triumph

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Matt Carpenter hit a two-run homer after subbing for an injured Carlos Beltran and the St. Louis Cardinals chased Matt Cain before a 3½-hour rain delay in the seventh inning of a 3-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants on Wednesday night for a 2-1 NL championship series lead.

Kyle Lohse worked around a season-worst five walks in 5 2-3 innings. Mitchell Boggs struck out Hunter Pence and Brandon Belt with two on to end the seventh. Jason Motte earned the first two-inning save of his career to reward what remained of a sellout crowd of 45,850 — perhaps a third — that stuck around for a game that lasted 3 hours, 2 minutes, about a half-hour shorter than the delay.

Giants second baseman Marco Scutaro had two hits and a clean game in the field, two days after Matt Holliday rammed him breaking up a double-play ball. Manager Bruce Bochy had said there would be no retaliation, and Game 3 was collision-free.

The big winners in a delay that featured about a half-hour without rain while officials awaited a second, smaller front: Beer vendors, by a single out. Alcohol sales are cut off after the seventh inning in all stadiums.

Cain lost for the second time this postseason, giving up three runs on five hits in 6 1-3 innings. The Giants, who entered the game batting just .217 in the postseason, were 0 for 7 with runners in scoring position.

The Cardinals snapped the Giants' five-game road winning streak in the post-season, three of them this year. Game 4 is in St. Louis on Thursday night, with Adam Wainwright pitching for the Cardinals. Tim Lincecum will start for the Giants.

Beltran limped to the trainer's room, taking the Cardinals' biggest clutch

October bat with him. Beltran strained his left knee running out a double-play ball in the first and the Cardinals said he was day to day.

Turns out they had the perfect substitute.

Carpenter followed Jon Jay's two-out single with a homer off Cain in his first at-bat of the NLCS.

Beltran is batting .400 in the postseason with three homers and six RBIs, but Carpenter had big numbers against Cain. He was 4 for 4 for his career against Cain, all four of the regular-season hits for singles.

This one was a much bigger deal, a drive on a 2-2 count that soared over the Cardinals bullpen in right field and was estimated at 421 feet.

■ Gregory's goal sparks 5-2 victory over Tigers

By Mitchell Stinson
Gleaner correspondent

Hopkinsville had all the momentum in Wednesday's Second Region Soccer Tournament opener, then Henderson County sophomore Nick Gregory launched a long free kick that changed everything. His 35-yard bazooka blast broke a 2-2 tie and energized a Colonels team that had gone flat in the wake of the Tigers' comeback.

Henderson pulled away to a 5-2 victory at Colonel Field. "Our guys just rallied around the momentum of that goal," said Henderson County coach Benson Pryor.

Hopkinsville had just rallied from a 2-0 deficit to tie the game on a pair of goals by the state's leading scorer — Austin Bucko. Gregory seemed unlikely to answer back when he lined up his long-range shot early in the second half. He'd already missed shorter free kicks.

But this one was a heat-seeking missile that never strayed from its target — the upper right corner of the net. It hit home in the 49th minute. "There's not a keeper in the state that's going to make that save," Pryor said.

Nine minutes later, Henderson County converted another impressive goal. This time it was a fancy Alec Calvert shot from close range. Standing sideways to the goal, he allowed Gregory's short crossing pass to roll between his feet, whipped his back leg around and slammed the ball downward. It bounced up and into the left side of the net.

"Most times I might not get contact and let it go to the next (teammate) behind me," Calvert said.

DARRIN PHEGLEY/THE GLEANER

This time, he took a stab and hit paydirt. Calvert celebrated so hard with his teammates that he soon collapsed with leg cramps and had leave the game, never to return.

"I think adrenalin got me through (the celebration), then after that both legs were through," he said.

The Colonels did fine without him, adding a third second-half goal on Zach Jones' hard roller through the goalie's fingers. Controversy erupted when Henderson keeper Jacob Stauffer was called for a foul in the box against an opponent who'd blocked his path.

Championship, 10 a.m.

As Henderson County coaches howled in protest, a penalty kick was awarded to the Tigers. It came with a high cost, however, because a Hopkinsville player was ejected during the hubbub for making an obscene gesture. Now limited to 10 players, the Tigers would be short-handed the rest of the way. Their comeback prospects took another crippling hit when Stauffer made a diving stop of Bucko's ensuing penalty kick.

Pryor singled that play out for praise but also saluted his entire defense for a great evening's effort. Hopkinsville's high-powered offense had its moments but put few shots on goal. Much of the credit went to speedy Kaelin Hildreth, who shadowed Bucko all over the field.

On offense, Calvert led the way with two goals, while Gregory contributed one goal and an assist. Chipping in with one score apiece were Jones and James Bickers.

The second semifinal lasted one half before inclement weather forced a postponement. It resumes today at 5:30 p.m., with Trigg County holding a 2-0 lead over Madisonville. The championship game has been moved to Saturday at 10 a.m.

Colonel foe Muhlenberg only 1-7 but improving

Muhlenberg County may have ended its 15-game losing streak and had district rival Marshall County on the ropes, but Mustangs coach Brandon Standiford has already put those feel-good moments behind him.

"Winning fixes a lot of problems," said Standiford, whose team beat Hopkins Central 28-26 on Sept. 21 for the program's first win since the 2010 season. "But we still made the same mistakes we've made all year. Winning does ease the pain, but that's been two or three weeks ago. We got our tails whipped by Daviess County last week."

The 1-7 Mustangs nearly upset Marshall County two weeks ago, leading 16-13 with under a minute to play before the Marshals scored to take a 20-16 victory. "That's a game we should have won," said Standiford, whose team visits Henderson County Friday in the 6-A First District finale for both teams. "At the end of the game, we had a penalty that I don't think should have been called and a personal foul that was very costly. Mistakes like that will cost you, but you can't leave the game up to the referees to decide."

Despite their one-win record, Muhlenberg County has shown improvement this season in the mind of Henderson County coach Clay Clevenger. "They're playing more aggressively on both sides of the ball. They're flying around on defense and making plays," he said.

Standiford would agree with Clevenger's assessment.

"We played a lot of freshmen and sophomores last year, and now they're sophomores and juniors," he said. "We're playing with a little more energy. Our football IQ has improved and I think we're starting to execute our offense and defense much better."

The Mustangs, who have won just seven games since the school was formed in 2009 with the consolidation of Muhlenberg North and South, will be moving into the EDDYVILLE, Ky. — Lightning halted Wednesday's semifinal match in the Girls Second Region Soccer Tournament with Hopkinsville leading Henderson County 1-0.

The match will resume today at 6 p.m. at Lee S. Jones Park in Eddyville. The winner will face Madisonville (20-1-1) in the championship match on Saturday. Madisonville advanced with a 10-0 mercy-rule victory over host Lyon County earlier on Wednesday.

Henderson County, which had lost to Hopkinsville 9-0 in its season opener, altered its lineup in an effort to slow down a high-powered Hopkinsville offense that averages 5.8 goals per game.

"They have two state forwards in Kelsey Humphries and Lexie Bozell. I decided to put two of my best players on them," said Henderson County coach Doc DeWitt, who had Christin Poole defend Humphries and put Emma Newland on Bozell. "They absolutely shut them down."

Humphries did score the only goal of the first half off a corner kick in the 23rd minute.

Soon after the end of the first half, officials spotted lightning to the west and cleared the field. As the lightning increased during a 30-minute delay, tournament officials and coaches decided to stop the contest for the night.

DeWitt would have liked to keep the match going. "We had the momentum. I think we had Hoptown worried," he said, "but we live to fight another day."

Nerlens Noel cleared to play for Cats this season by NCAA

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

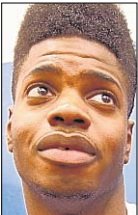

LEXINGTON — Kentucky freshman forward Nerlens Noel has been cleared by the NCAA to play this season for the Wildcats.

NCAA spokesman Cameron Schuh said Wednesday the 6-foot-10, 228-pound Noel was “cleared to practice and play” following a probe into the funding of unofficial visits to Kentucky.

Schuh did not provide any details or findings of the NCAA’s investigation.

Before Wednesday’s decision, Noel, considered the nation’s top recruit, could only practice after finishing summer classes to meet reclassification requirements.

Kentucky spokesman DeWayne Peevy said via Wildcats open Nov. 9 against Maryland at the Barclays Center Classic in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Kentucky coach John Calipari first revealed Noel’s status during a Wednesday morning appearance on ESPN promoting tonight’s debut of the network’s all-access program about the Wildcats.

However, Calipari seemed confident during last week’s media day that Noel would be eligible, saying, “he will practice, text that the school does not confirm eligibility until competition begins.

The defending national champion and if we played tomorrow, he would play.”

Noel is part of Kentucky’s highly touted freshman class including 7-footer Willie Cauley-Stein, guard Archie Goodwin and forward Alex Poythress.

His game has been compared to Anthony Davis, last year’s Final Four most outstanding player after leading the Wildcats to their eighth title. Davis went on to become the NBA’s top overall draft pick and win an Olympic gold medal with Team USA in London this summer.

Noel, who talked with Davis after arriving on campus, didn’t seem concerned about his eligibility last week.

“I’m not worrying about it at all,” he said. “I’m just focusing on getting better every day.”

Churchill closer to September dates

By Bruce Schreiner
Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Churchill Downs cleared a key hurdle Wednesday in its pursuit of September racing that would give the famed track a third live meet next year.

A panel of state racing regulators recommended that the Louisville track, home of the Kentucky Derby, pick up September racing dates that traditionally have gone to Turfway Park in northern Kentucky.

Churchill is seeking permission for four three-day weekends in September, in addition to its usual spring and late-fall meets.

The full Kentucky Horse Racing Commission is expected to vote on the entire 2013 live racing schedule statewide at its meeting next Tuesday.

Churchill hopes to capitalize on the typical good weather in September in hopes of attracting throngs of horsemen and fans.

One of the track’s goals is to emerge as a big player in the thoroughbred simulcast market if it enters September racing, traditionally a “soft month” nationally, track president Kevin Flanery told reporters afterward.

The track also plans at least two night racing events in September.

“It gives us something new and innovative to do,” he said.

Meanwhile, struggling Turfway Park would have its live racing schedule cut nearly in half, from 81 days this year to 45 in 2013, as part of the full thoroughbred racing slate recommended by the racing commission’s Race Dates Committee.

Besides losing September racing, the suburban track in Florence would scale back its February schedule to just two racing days.

Turfway officials predicted the scaled-back racing schedule will allow the track to raise its daily purses in hopes of attracting more quality horses.

Louisville picked No. 1 in Big East

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Louisville, which has three starters back from last season's Final Four team, is the unanimous choice for first place in the Big East basketball coaches' poll.

The Cardinals, who won the Big East tournament last season, received 14 first-place votes and Notre Dame got the other, obviously from Louisville coach Rick Pitino.

Syracuse, coming off a school-record 34-3 mark, was second in the poll and Notre Dame, which returns all five starters, was third.

Cincinnati was fourth followed by Georgetown, Pittsburgh, Marquette, USF, Connecticut, St. John's, Rutgers, Villanova, DePaul, Seton Hall and Providence.

Peyton Siva was selected preseason player of the year, the first time a Louisville player received that honor.

Joining Siva on the first team were Jack Cooley of Notre Dame, Vincent Council of Providence, Sean Kilpatrick of Cincinnati, Gorgui Dieng of Louisville and Otto Porter of Georgetown.

READ THIS NOW OR STAY AN OLD MAN!

Doctors discover natural compound that 'resets' a man's biological clock, to rev up energy and stamina to that of a 20-year-old!

- Millions of men suffer from low testosterone, but very few of them want to talk or even think about it – because the symptoms of low testosterone cut to the very core of their self-confidence and masculine identity. They include:
- Decreased muscle tone
 - Increased fatigue and irritability
 - Depression
 - Low or decreased sex drive
 - Impaired sexual performance
 - Restless sleep
 - Decreased stamina and strength
 - Inability to concentrate

A rather daunting list, wouldn't you say? And yet the ravages of low testosterone can go well beyond feeling tired and blah all the time. It can raise your cholesterol and blood pressure and put you at greater risk for such medical ills as heart disease, stroke, osteoporosis, reduced immune function, and even memory loss! It's really quite alarming, yet most men simply ignore it because... well, because some of those symptoms are just too shameful and embarrassing to face.

But guess what?

All that misery is totally unnecessary – because low testosterone happens to be very normal –and very treatable!

According to the FDA, even though about five million men in the U.S. may suffer from some sort of testosterone deficiency – only about 5% of them will ever seek treatment! That's a lot of needless depression and sexual frustration, don't you think?

The fact is that lower testosterone is a completely normal sign of aging. By the time a man is 70, he is producing (on average) just half the testosterone of a 20-year-old.

Testosterone levels begin to decline in the mid-twenties and continually diminish thereafter. Testosterone is usually measured in nanograms per deciliter (ng/dl)—the number of billionths of a gram found in 100 milliliters of blood serum. The “normal range” usually reported on a laboratory report runs from about 290 to 900 ng/dl.

That’s how one guy described his low-testosterone blues – but it really doesn’t have to be that way. Not now, and not ever – because now there’s a new, safe, and clinically proven way to boost your testosterone level and regain your manhood. You don’t need a prescription or expensive visits to your doctor.

And you don’t even need to risk your hard-earned money – because TrueMaleIQ is now available (while supplies last) on a satisfaction-guaranteed basis! We are that confident that you are simply going to be thrilled and delighted by the new reinvigorated you – or else get your money back.

Why is TrueMaleIQ the real deal for boosting your most essential male hormone?

The key ingredient in TrueMaleIQ – Testofen™ – raises your T-level naturally, which can restore your vim, vitality, and put you “back in the mood” more quickly than you ever thought possible. In just a few days, the “old you” – from 10 or even 20 years ago – is back. You’re going to flat out love it – and so will your pleasantly surprised partner!

Testofen™ is an exclusively formulated extract of fenugreek standardized for 50% Fenuside. Fenuside is a set of potent saponide glycosides that not only enables your body to produce more testosterone, but also emulates testosterone by binding to testosterone receptor sites and creating testosterone-like activity.

In other words, Testofen™ provides a unique dual mechanism for replenishing your testosterone-starved body. Subjects reported an increase of nearly 9% in their overall testosterone levels. More impressively, there was a reported average increase of more than 60% in the subjects’ free testosterone levels.

Such a significant elevation of testosterone can help build muscle mass, restore energy, increase your stamina – and, perhaps best of all – get you more “into the mood!”

“I decided to try TrueMale IQ and 3 weeks into taking the product I am seeing great results. That little bit of energy and motivation I’ve been missing has returned!”

- Christopher M., TX

“Searched extensively and luckily found this product, as Testofen seems to be the only herbal extract that actually increases my testosterone levels.”

- Adam R., FLA

“This product is the one and only supplement that really turned me back into a man again! My muscle mass and energy is finally increasing.”

- Brad L., GA

Could your love life use a boost?

TrueMaleIQ can also do wonders for your love life. This formula is clinically shown to increase libido in men, boosting both drive and desire. In a six-week clinical study (double- blind, randomized and placebo-controlled) the unique TrueMaleIQ formula significantly increased in sexual function, performance and satisfaction for men taking the supplement over those on the placebo. What will your test trial of TrueMaleIQ show? We’ve just made it easier than ever to find out!

Google opens window into secretive data centers

By Michael Liedtke
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Google is opening a virtual window into the secretive data centers where an intricate maze of computers process Internet search requests, show YouTube video clips and distribute email for millions of people.

The unprecedented peek is being provided through a new website unveiled Wednesday at <http://www.google.com/about/datacenters/gallery/>. The site features photos from inside some of the eight data centers that Google Inc. already has running in the U.S., Finland and Belgium. Google is also building data centers in Hong Kong, Taiwan, Singapore and Chile.

Virtual tours of a North Carolina data center also will be available through Google's "Street View" service, which is usually used to view photos of neighborhoods around the world.

The photographic access to Google's data centers coincides with the publication of a Wired magazine article about how the company builds and operates them. The article is written by Steven Levy, a journalist who won Google's trust while writing "In The Plex," a book published last year about the company's philosophy and evolution.

The data centers represent Google's nerve center, although none are located near the company's headquarters in Mountain View, Calif.

As Google blossomed from its roots in a Silicon Valley garage, company co-founders Larry

Page and Sergey Brin worked with other engineers to develop a system to connect low-cost computer servers in a way that would help them realize their ambition to provide a digital roadmap to all of the world's information.

Initially, Google just wanted enough computing power to index all the websites on the Internet and deliver quick responses to search requests. As Google's tentacles extended into other markets, the company had to keep adding more computers to store videos, photos, email and information about their users' preferences.

The insights that Google gathers about the more than 1 billion people that use its services has made the company a frequent target of privacy complaints around the world. The latest missive came Tuesday in Europe, where regulators told Google to revise a 7-month-old change to its privacy policy that enables the company to combine user data collected from its different services.

Advice

Stress good values at home so they carry over to school

Dear Amy: My husband and I would like to send our two children to private schools because we believe these are more academically challenging than the public schools in our area. My concern is this: While I want my children to get the best possible education, I worry about the “snob factor” associated with these schools.

The young people dress expensively, and I even know many parents who see drinking, pot smoking and partying as tolerable, if not an inevitable part of high school life.

I was surprised to see how many parents not only condoned this behavior, but also condoned their children’s cliques and “label-conscious” clothing.

I am grateful that we can provide a good education, but I also don’t want our kids to believe that an elitist mentality is acceptable. How do we curb the “snob factor”

– Not a Snob

Vinegar should take residue off your iron

Dear Heloise: I have a nonstick iron that has sticky residue on it. The residue comes off on clothes when I try to use the iron.

How do I get rid of the sticky residue without harming the nonstick surface? How do I prevent my iron from getting the residue again?

– A Reader, via email

Dear Reader: First, check your owners manual or the company’s website. Or you can use one of my favorite cleaning products, vinegar.

Take a damp cloth, soak it in diluted white or apple-cider vinegar and wipe the bottom surface of the cool iron. Do this only while the iron is unplugged. This should remove the buildup, but it may take several tries. You also can use a plastic scrubbie.

The residue can come from many things: a fabric that melted onto the iron; or, if you use starch, especially spray starch, it can leave a buildup that needs to be cleaned occasionally.

– Heloise

Dear Heloise: I read your column in The (Colorado Springs, Colo.) Gazette. I used your recipe for cleaning silver for the first time, and it was simply amazing.

Do you have a recipe for cleaning brass?

– Anna F., Colorado.

Dear Not: I shared your letter with Michael Thompson, author of “The Pressured Child: Freeing Our Kids From Performance Overdrive and Helping Them Find Success in School and Life” (2005, Ballantine Books).

He responds, “I trust independent schools to offer children a first-rate education by providing demanding academics, teachers with high morale, enriched extracurriculars and small class size. The downside of such schools is that the children in them may take privilege for granted.

“You can send your child to an independent school and keep him or her from becoming a snob by insisting on good family values, by asking your child to work and do chores, and by asking him or her to contribute to their community through service.”

No matter what school your children attend, your values at home will always be paramount. The message you should convey is, “Your character is the most important part of who you are.”

Dear Amy: “Concerned Parents” were worried about their 5-year-old daughter receiving inappropriate gifts at her birthday party. I am surprised that you didn’t suggest the most popular way to “control” the gifts and do good at the same time.

When our daughter wanted birthday parties with her friends, we would have her pick a charity such as the local animal shelter or homeless shelter and then request unwrapped gifts that were on the charity’s “gift” lists.

This helped us avoid our daughter receiving too many gifts and helped her learn that others have needs that she could help fulfill.

– Wisconsin Mother

Dear Mother: Many parents offered this excellent solution. Thank you all.

Think carefully before leaving church behind back on church, you’re also turning your back on God — and that concerns them very deeply. Perhaps they’ve seen others go down that same road — and they know it eventually leads to moral and spiritual disaster.

Are they right about you? Are you hoping to leave God behind, as well as your church?

Only you can say, of course — but I urge you to face this question honestly. Sometimes we can do things without even realizing why we’re really doing them — or at least without understanding where a decision will lead us.

I too found church boring when I was your age; I even might have dropped out if my parents had let me. But then I met Jesus Christ and committed my life to Him, and everything changed.

The Bible came alive for me, and I looked forward to the opportunity to have fellowship with other believers.

Turn to Christ and open your heart and life to Him, and then ask Him to help you grow closer to Him as you have opportunities to learn from older believers.

Talk to rheumatologist about alternatives to prednisone

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: In the past couple of years, I have developed dry mouth, which has become severe. My rheumatologist said that it is Sjogren’s syndrome. She said it should be treated with prednisone, but I will not take prednisone because of the terrible side effects.

Is there another drug out there without the side effects of prednisone that can help me? I am desperate.

– M.B.

Dear M.B.: Sjogren’s (SHOW-grins) syndrome is an autoimmune disease — one in which the body’s immune system goes on the attack. In your case, its focus is the glands that produce tears and saliva. The hallmark is generalized dryness. Other parts of the body can be affected.

Sjogren’s syndrome can exist by itself, or in combination with other illnesses, such as rheumatoid arthritis.

There is no cure for Sjogren’s syndrome. There is treatment. Prednisone is sometimes used for Sjogren’s syndrome, but newer medicines have some benefit for people with varieties of Sjogren’s that affect blood vessels, joints or the lungs.

I would recommend you go back to your rheumatologist and see if she can work with you to find some alternatives to prednisone.

Since a persistent dry mouth can lead to early and extensive dental disease, regular dental care is imperative. There are over-the-counter products for dry mouth that work well and can help prevent this, but see your dentist.

A valuable resource for patients with Sjogren’s is the Sjogren’s Syndrome Foundation. You can reach the foundation online at www.sjogrens.org or by calling 800-475-6473.

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: In spite of training, it is fairly common to see phlebotomists employ what I think is poor technique. For example, after wiping the skin over the vein with an alcohol pad, a phlebotomist palpated the vein with a bare finger just before inserting the needle.

Would you care to comment?

– J.K.Q.

Dear J.K.Q.: Indeed, I would. There are at least two problems you are describing. The first is that after taking care to reduce the risk of infection with alcohol, the phlebotomist is putting his or her non-sterile finger over the cleaned area, which makes no sense.

Secondly, in 2012 phlebotomists shouldn’t be performing phlebotomy without gloves, to protect themselves from blood-borne infections.

Hospitals are increasingly empowering patients to ask about hand-washing and other techniques to reduce infection. This is a time when you can ask the phlebotomist to alcohol the area again and wear gloves.

Horoscope

TODAY’S BIRTHDAY: (Oct. 18). It’s a year of expansion, and you’ll become known for something new. The fresh faces in your life will bring out a different side of you. December features aggressive action on the career front. January is for sorting out financial details and healing family drama, too. February and May will be exquisitely romantic. Aries and Gemini people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 40, 6, 2, 14 and 9.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). Life is filled with contradictions. Instead of expecting people to be one way, you leave mental room for the possibilities. You’ll react to how things are instead of trying to force your reality onto them.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). You’ll be doing the upkeep necessary to keep life rolling smoothly along: the car needs an oil change, the air filters need replacing, etc. Handling it all in a timely manner boosts your confidence.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). The health of a partnership depends on your ability to deal with problems together. Don’t leave an issue unresolved today, or resentments will form. Get everything out on the table.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). You’ll lead with a generous spirit and treat your loved ones the way you know they would like to be treated, even when it may not be deserved. Eventually, everything evens out.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). A problem will alert you that your feelings are flowing in an unhelpful direction. Once you get that message, you no longer need to pay attention to the problem. Change the way you project emotions, and the issue will go away.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Strangers sense that you’re someone to know. Stay modest. The fact that you don’t feel the need to talk about your accomplishments says that you’ve accomplished quite a lot.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Look through old pictures, notes and souvenirs from your past. It will invigorate your current scene to remember who you’ve been at different times in your life. Those people are still inside of you.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Spiritual work is all about clearing the obstacles to free-flowing energy and increasing your awareness. You will do both today and make progress along your spiritual path.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Someone will come to you for help, but you may not see a clear way to give this person what he or she wants. Just being available to listen may be enough.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The masters suggest that true self-esteem doesn’t depend on anything outside of you. But how can humans be expected to find self-worth in oppressive environments? You’ll rectify a situation that’s clearly wrong.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Your day is filled with love, fun and friendship. What makes this possible is the work you did earlier in the week. So enjoy without guilt, knowing that you deserve the happiness you experience.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). There are too many people who postpone or give up their dreams in order to take care of others. Unearth your buried passion because your turn is coming.

“Glow in the Dark” will be the theme for this year’s homecoming dance, which will take place this Friday at Henderson County High School after the Colonel football game.

Prior to the dance, this year’s football homecoming queen and king will be crowned during halftime of the game against Muhlenberg County High School.

Throughout the week, the HCHS student body has been able to dress up in special themes each day. Monday was miss-match day; Tuesday was dress like twins; Wednesday, dress like you’re going to your job; today, sports team apparel day; and Friday; “Crazy” maroon and white attire.

Prizes for the “best dressed” will be given out throughout the week, courtesy of the Colonel Crazies, according to Derika Lynam-Spaetti, an HCHS math teacher who is the faculty member overseeing homecoming.

The dance will take place from 9 to 11 p.m. in the auxiliary gym. Tickets are on sale in advance and also at the door. Guests who would like to attend must complete the proper paperwork, Lynam-Spaetti said.

■ Woody, Chloe learn that horseback riding one of many fun activities in Kentucky

EDITOR’S NOTE: This 10-part Newspaper in Education chapter series titled “Unleashed: A Kentucky Adventure” was written by Kentucky author Leigh Anne Florence and illustrated by Kentucky artist Chris Ware. The stories feature the adventures of Kentucky’s famous dachshund, Woody, and his sister, Chloe.

For the second time in my life, I had fallen off a horse. Granted, the first time was the horse at the supermarket, but falling off Chester hurt even more. I don’t know what I was more upset over — falling off Chester or not getting a picture of the moose.

“It was an elk, Woody, not a moose,” Pete said, correcting me when I told him the story. “Elk are prevalent in Kentucky’s forests. When you went to grab the camera, you lost your balance and fell off. The thump you heard was your helmet hitting the ground.”

“Thank goodness for the helmet,” I said, happy that Pete had made me wear one.

“Glad to know you’re OK,” he said. “Sometimes photographing wildlife can hurt them unintentionally. Most animals get spooked when a human approaches them. Sometimes it causes the animal to flee or attack. Please remember that next time.”

We finished the trail ride and thanked Pete for all his help.

“I hope we can come back

soon to ride,” I said to Pete as we were leaving.

“We would love to have you back,” Pete responded, “but Kentucky is horse country. There are places all over the state to go horseback riding. Go to <http://www.getoutky.com> to find a list.” I wrote down the website, excited about the possibility to go horseback riding again.

After sleeping under the stars and eating a healthy breakfast of granola and fresh strawberries, we opened up our next Rx card from Doc Albert. Dad asked me to read the card.

“While you could find countless activities in the Daniel Boone National Forest and eastern Kentucky area, it’s time to move to another region. Dad: Drive north on Highway 11, then go left on Highway 9 for 42 miles. Then you’ll see an intersection. Your new trainer will meet you. Pups: Use the brochures I’ve included and make a list of all the activities you can do in Kentucky. Include where the activities are located.”

As Dad drove and Mom rode shotgun, Chloe and I read the Kentucky brochures. We were amazed to find out some interesting facts about the Bluegrass.

“Listen,” Chloe said, grabbing everyone’s attention. “This brochure says Kentucky has 39,732 square miles of land with commercial forest land occupying 12.7 million acres; has more miles of running water than any other state except Alaska, and 1,100 miles are used for commercial transportation. And Kentucky has 52 state parks, including 24 recreation state parks, 17 Kentucky resort parks (more than any other state) and 11 historic state parks.”

“With all of that, there is no excuse for us not to exercise while we enjoy the state,” Mom said, looking at us from the front seat.

“Unfortunately, it sounds like we need exercise,” Chloe offered. “Kentucky ranks sixth in the nation for having the most obese residents, second for losing our teeth, and it has a high rate of cancer deaths and more smokers than any other state.”

I hadn’t wanted to change my eating habits and exercise more, but that information convinced me it was necessary — not only for me but for my state.

I browsed the pages of “Kentucky’s Guide to Unbridled Adventure.” There were pages of exciting things to do. I rambled off a long list of activities we could do and never leave Kentucky: “skydiving, mountain biking, canoeing, kayaking, caving, rock climbing, zip-lining, water skiing, sailing, scuba diving, fishing, shooting, archery ...”

“We can do all of that in Kentucky?” Mom asked, stopping me before I finished.

“Yes, ma’am,” I answered, excited at all our state offered. Chloe and I counted the listings in the book. There were 358 places in Kentucky where we could participate in various activities.

“Mom, can you believe there are 58 places we could canoe or kayak in Kentucky?”

We were still counting the places where we could find adventure when Dad said, “We’re here.”

Uh-oh! I wiped my eyes, shut them and opened them again to make sure I was seeing correctly. I had obviously read the Rx card wrong. Talk about being in a pickle!

Go to www.kypress.com to hear Woody read each chapter and try the interactive chapter activities. Thanks to Kentucky Utilities/LG&E, Kentucky Office for Adventure Tourism, Kentucky Press Association and Newspaper in Education for helping to make this project possible.

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Oct. 18, the 292nd day of 2012. There are 74 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 18, 1962, James D. Watson, Francis Crick and Maurice Wilkins were honored with the Nobel Prize for Medicine and Physiology for determining the double-helix molecular structure of DNA.

On this date:

In 1867, the United States took formal possession of Alaska from Russia.

In 1892, the first long-distance telephone line between New York and Chicago was officially opened (it could only handle one call at a time).

In 1931, inventor Thomas Alva Edison died in West Orange, N.J., at age 84.

In 1969, the federal government banned artificial sweeteners known as cyclamates because of evidence they caused cancer in laboratory rats.

In 1971, the Knapp Commission began public hearings into allegations of corruption in the New York City police department (the witnesses included Frank Serpico).

Ten years ago: The Vatican demanded that America's Roman Catholic bishops revise their hard-line crackdown policy on sexually abusive priests, saying that elements conflicted with universal church law. (In 2005, the U.S. bishops voted overwhelmingly to stick with the main points of the discipline plan.)

Think about it

"Slow down and enjoy life. It's not only the scenery you miss by going too fast — you also miss the sense of where you are going and why." — Eddie Cantor, American comedian-singer (1892-1964).
